

Art installation at the front of the Church

Restore

Cassandra Joucebrand, 2020

Paper and Wire

Every day, we go through many emotions; some good, some bad and during these recent times the uncertainty of what is happening around us has brought up new emotions we may have never experienced before.

The dandelion is a symbol of emotional healing. Although delicate in appearance, the dandelion stands strong and proud.

Using paper and wire to create this origami dandelion, they represent the complexity of our emotions and the process of healing; the fragility of the paper versus the strong wire. The jeopardy of the falling and burnt seeds show the deconstruction of the orb of emotions. Sometimes to allow ourselves to heal, we have to let go and other times we need the 'destroyed' seeds to help shape and connect with ourselves and with others.